Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Friday 14 May 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Showers for many parts into the weekend.

Today:
A cloudy start for all with some sunny spells developing by day. Staying dry for most in the north and east but across southern England, Wales and particularly Northern Ireland some showers breaking out by day.

Tonight:
Rain arriving from the southwest with some heavy bursts and moving northeast overnight. Much of Scotland and northern England staying dry. Cool in the far north.

Saturday:
Cloudy with rain across much of the UK to start. This breaking down to showers again by day, heaviest in the south and west. Northern Scotland faring best.

Outlook for Sunday to Tuesday:
Remaining changeable with sunny spells and scattered showers which will be locally heavy with a risk of hail and thunder, particularly in the south. Remaining rather cool.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.